Rapid detection of a recombinant avian adenovirus vaccine strain using the EZ1 DNA Blood Card™ from Qiagen. The EZ1 DNA Blood Card™ (Qiagen) is a blood-based, real-time PCR that detects the presence of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) in blood and offers the capability to identify the viral load. We tested the EZ1 DNA Blood Card for the detection of a recombinant vaccine strain of an avian adenovirus, ADV-O (Ostrich adenovirus) [DNA-2] in blood. Blood samples containing ADV-O vaccine in PBS and ADV-O vaccine in blood (virus-containing blood) were inoculated in the allantoic cavity of 9-day-old SPF chicken embryos for 2 hr. The allantoic fluids were used to prepare ADV-O vaccine. ADV-O DNA-2 and ADV-O (DNA-1) blood samples were also inoculated in the allantoic cavity of 9-day-old SPF chicken embryos for 2 hr. The allantoic fluids were used to prepare ADV-O DNA-2 and ADV-O (DNA-1) vaccine. Two experiments were performed: 1) preliminary analysis to determine the limit of detection and 2) quantitative analysis to determine the limit of quantification. The limit of detection in the preliminary study was determined using a dilution series of ADV-O DNA-1 virus inoculated in the allantoic cavity of 9-day-old SPF chicken embryos for 2 hr and processed to prepare ADV-O e79caf774b
