HyperMotion technology uses feedback technology to help players better understand the game and compete for possession and open up all the important areas of the pitch. Such feedback includes pass lane information, the off-ball action of opponents, the behaviour of the players closest to your move and the way that your player controls the ball. This can make it very simple to understand and execute a number of key elements of the game. The accuracy of the player's movement is further enhanced by the addition of the new 'Deceptive' AI, which will refuse to concede possession of the ball if the game is in a tactical situation. Defend, attack, and everything in between: players can now defend, attack and all the important ball-related skills in the same way they play on the pitch, from the use of the left and right stick to dribbling and the head or body feints. Passes can be struck in all directions, and the left and right triggers can be used to slash a pass, perform a shot, or to cross the ball in any direction. Movement: your skill in running with the ball, passing, and controlling your movement on the pitch will be far greater than ever before, and players will be able to dribble opponents, run to the by-line and whip in cross after cross with all the creativity of their real-life counterparts. Tactics: With more information than ever before – including a context-sensitive tactical HUD that provides detailed information on the state of play – your understanding of the game will be unparalleled. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
