There were no injuries or evacuations, and mine officials said they were glad to see no serious injuries. Our reporters on the scene say that smoke billowed from the mine early Tuesday morning, and that a local resident called the local police department. Rescue crews rushed to the scene to prevent any further explosions, and the mine was declared safe. Answering a 911 call, the Fire Department checked the safety of people living nearby and the Health Department measured air quality for hours after the explosion. Despite the explosion, the Boulder County Sheriff's office said it was going to continue searching for any potential suspects. Officials said that they expected the search to take longer than usual because of the unstable nature of the area. ___ Our reporters on the scene said that neighbors near the mine told them a man was seen driving away from the scene, but that there was no report
