No, he's not Pete the Smokey. He's a high-level referee, a man I respect, who's an integral part of the game. Someone who's been referred to in most conversations as simply 'Rob'. But he's a huge music fan, an iPhone addict and he was taking the greatest chance of his life when he didn't cancel his Match of the Day subscription. Which is why he'd flown over from Australia (oddly enough) to catch Liverpool at Anfield this evening with great anticipation. He went over to Peter Thompson's old roost for the handshake, a few words were exchanged, and then Rob took the chance to walk down the front and kick him, as hard as he could, in the liver. You heard that right. He was standing there for the handshake, looked into the eyes of the man who did Liverpool so much good, and instead of saying 'hello' or 'have a good night' or something like that, he just kicked him. It's just so out of order. When Rob plays football you want him to do things like that. 0cc13bf012

The following is a copy of the message I sent to another employee and to the Human Resources department. Key: Message I know that I can use the user interface to change the password for the user, but what happens when the system is being managed by the IBM Systems Director license's IMA Agent Manager? Will that change the password for that user? A: The user will be able to change their password from the IMA Agent manager console. You can access the console via an icon in your task bar, or via the console window. Ensure that the active user is logged in to the Windows Session (use windows username and password) and access the Agents manager. The password change will take place and then you can immediately log in as the user. A: It's possible to change a Windows account's password from the command-line, using a utility called 'PuTTY'. If you install PuTTY on a computer, you can then connect to it using a command like 'ssh -l username username@ip.address.here'. There are several options to this command, but once connected to the computer that contains the user account, you can change the password of the user's account by first running: passwd This will allow you to enter the new password for that user. It's possible you may need to run this command as administrator if the user account is flagged as needing elevation. When you're done, you can close the PuTTY session, and the change takes effect as soon as the computer is restarted. Apple, Google, Microsoft and Amazon suffered the most significant losses in the first quarter of this year, according to figures published by Bloomberg. The four companies represented more than half of the value of all of the stocks traded in Europe. Microsoft is second on the list at $196bn (£138bn), with Amazon third with $161bn and Amazon and Google tied for fourth at $170bn. The figures come as the four technology giants are under siege in the markets. Apple shares have fallen 5.8 per cent in the last week, while those of Amazon have tumbled 11 per cent. Amazon is struggling with its retail operations, while Apple and Google are forced to pay billions of pounds in taxes after wrongly refusing to do so. The Bloomberg list is based on the total value of all of the stocks that trade in Europe
