Q: Why does systemd keep starting a program repeatedly? I'm looking for answers for a pretty simple problem and the internet is being extremely unhelpful. I have a program that I have used in the past with no issues, but now that I'm switching to a new Debian 9 (stretch) install, systemd keeps starting that program multiple times. I've tried stopping the service as well as deleting all its settings files, but nothing seems to work. Here's the output of the commands:

alex@lex0:~$ ps -ef | grep awesome-icons-git
947? 00:00:00 awesome-icons-git
948? 00:00:00 awesome-icons-git
alex@lex0:~$ cat /etc/sysconfig/awesome-icons-git
'awesome-icons-git' is a system service, do not edit it directly
Comment this out if you do not want awesome-icons-git to run on your system
#DAEMON_ARGS=""
#DAEMON_OPTS="-c"
And the output of service -s for awesome-icons-git:
alex@lex0:~$ service -s awesome-icons-git **
