This versatile set of components supports a full range of today's mainstream and emerging manufacturing processes, modeling any combination of technical and physical phenomena, and helping users reduce design, development, and manufacturing costs. SIMULIA XStream is a set of software applications that together provide a coherent solution for data management, analysis, and process design with advanced data visualization and automation. Simplify your work. There's more to building simulation models than the creation of your problem. Simplify the model building process. Use abaqus eigen. This free software is a second-generation multi-physics codes. It supports a variety of physical equations in three and four dimensions, and has the capability to couple to other physics codes. The engine is based on the finite element method to solve the continuum mechanics and thermomechanics problems.
