Content editing tools often rely on non-obvious quick shortcuts and custom behaviors, something I am finding more and more that works well with Creative Cloud for me. Sure, there are some frustrations, but all things considered, it is still worth it. Considering all that is rendered for you in the edit window, the new groups and their colors, as well as the layers and associated layer groups, it makes sense to me that IT would introduce new color standards. Yes, their color libraries are going to change, but at least we are going to have the option to choose any color we want instead of a single variation of a few colors. Long gone are the days where we must take what Adobe wants to color us and I welcome that change very much. For the first time, layers now have groups, and I absolutely love this feature. As long as I have to say that, I also have to mention the fact that white objects do not appear when zoomed way into a canvas, as is the case in the previous version. It is that white layer that acts as the background and also causes you to lose sharpness on the closest parts of a black foreground object. In all fairness, it is a problem we should have had all along, but it is a little disappointing to find out that now bad object seperation doesn't fade in the same way as everything else. Related Posted in Creative, Creative Apps, Photoshop, Tuts+, TutorialsQ: How to use "Ned is playing the guitar in his band" as a verb? I got an email that said something like this. I can't make sense of "play the guitar" as a verb. Am I misunderstanding something or do "the" and "guitar" have a different meaning in this sentence? Ned is playing the guitar in his band. A: He is playing the guitar, in his band, as in, "I want to give him a raise, he is playing the guitar right now, in his band". Not sure if you want to tack on "right now" here. It's a verb meaning that the guy (his name) is playing the guitar in the band. As it stands, I think you are talking about a noun, in which case, it's effectively the same as: Ned is _____ his band A: No, there isn't "the" and "guitar" having a different meaning here. I would expect it to read like this: Ned is playing the guitar in his band. "Play" is the verb here, and the two objects are assumed to be nouns.
